

International Association of Art Critics

32 rue Yves Toudic – 75010 Paris – FRANCE

The International office

Paris, September 19th, 2007

To whom it may concern,

The International Association of Art Critics has been affiliated to UNESCO as a non-governmental organisation (NGO) since the late of 1940s, and is universally recognised as the only international professional association in the field of art criticism, with over 4,000 members grouped into National Sections in over 64 countries and an international ('open') Section.

The AICA Press Card, which provides free access and professional courtesy to AICA members, is recognised and honoured by museums and art institutions around the world. These institutions, large and small, recognise the benefit they gain, from enabling AICA members to carry out professional research and adequately perform their role, as critics in all media and specialists in the related domains of education and curation. The most obvious aspects of this, of course, derive from the enhanced public awareness and scholarly interest created by our members' published work in magazines, newspapers, books, on the radio and in the electronic media. Museums and galleries everywhere, and on all continents, honour the AICA Press Card. If your institution is not aware of this agreement, which allows our members free access to all museums and art centres in every country in the world, in addition to other occasional benefits, such as free or discounted publications, we would ask you to be kind enough bring this arrangement into operation promptly.

Please find below a facsimile of the newly re-designed AICA Press Card, for the information of your staff. Further information about AICA and its aims and constitution may be found on its website at www.aica-int.org.

The Administrative Council and Executive Bureau of AICA thank you, in advance, for your full cooperation in granting AICA members free access and other incidental benefits, upon presentation of a valid AICA Press Card, bearing a stamp for the calendar year in question.

Thank you in advance for your greatly valued co-operation. We remain at your disposal for any further information you may need, or for revalidation of any individual's claim to membership over which there might be the slightest doubt.

Yours Sincerely,
